AN E-BOOK

Life Force

Lost and Found

Life-force · Heal from within.

DR. ALKA CHOPRA MADAN

DOCTOR OF METAPHYSICAL COUNSELING MC.D

Soul Body Healing.....

Life Force

Lost and Found

By

DR. ALKA CHOPRA MADAN

DOCTOR OF METAPHYSICAL COUNSELING MC.D

Contents

Acknowledgments 4

Introduction 5

CHAPTER 1
What is Life-Force? 7

CHAPTER 2
What affects our Life-Force? 10

CHAPTER 3
Positive Thinking 13

CHAPTER 4
Healing from negative thinking 16

CHAPTER 5
Life Force and Death 19

CHAPTER 6
Metaphysical Healing 22

CHAPTER 7
Trauma 24

CHAPTER 8
Forgiveness 27

CHAPTER 9
Happiness 30

CHAPTER 10
Alternative healing 34

CHAPTER 11
“Recover Yourself” 35

CHAPTER 12
Conclusion 39

REFERENCES
Works Cited 45

Acknowledgments

I would like to express my gratitude to my greatest inspiration Sir Dr. Paul Leon Masters, without whom this dissertation would not have been possible.

I would also like to thank my family and friends from the bottom of my heart for their valuable support and warmth.

Introduction

I find myself surrounded by people who have lost their zest jest for life as if the life force has been taken from them. I have stepped aside from the masses and have realized that I am not a body or a physical object only. I am the spirit or the life force that runs the body. The solutions that will increase my spiritual growth or increase my life force will be the real solutions. The solution for happier survival lies more in the metaphysical universe than the physical universe.

Life Force is a continuum. Energy can neither be created nor destroyed, it simply changes form. The universe is full of energy, both in the physical and metaphysical worlds. The life force attempts to understand the physical universe and in this attempt gets hurt, betrayed and lost. The losses incurred encourage Life Force to strive to win the physical universe. The physical universe is an illusion and made-up world. The moment this understanding dawn upon the life force its quest to win the physical universe is over. Life Force is light and volatile; the physical universe is heavy and solid. In this interaction Life force gets beaten up, betrayed, injured, hurt. Life-force changes from being light and volatile to solid and heavy. More pain gets stored less life force remains in any individual. The effort is to reduce or eliminate the pain to regain the Life Force.

Life Force gets less with growing body age and lifetime after lifetime. My book seeks to acknowledge that shocks whether physical or emotional tend to lock the life force in the incident. The general tendency is to try to put it behind and keep on with living. Such unsorted incidents bring in pain, suffering, misfortune, misery and psychosomatic illnesses.

I have researched, going back to the original painful incidents of physical or emotional shock help recovering life force. I have named it as “Recover Yourself” counseling. I have assimilated a laser-sharp process for the recovery of life force out of these incidents. Every session will recover the life force. Recovery of life force will heal the soul, heal the body, create a better future, get rid of misery. The process is simple and can be learned by anyone. I aim to create more counselors and self-help therapy with this technique. This book will discuss the importance of positive thinking and how dealing with emotional stress can help reduce other ailments. Holistic and alternative healing along with traditional medicine can help clients recover sooner.

CHAPTER 1

What is Life-Force?

What is the life-force? To answer this magnificent question I have researched and found that it has been called different names throughout the world, Prana, Chi, Spirit or Bio-energy are some terms that refer to the vital energy that flows in living beings and keep us alive. No matter which culture you refer to, life force has been discussed for centuries. A lot of importance has been given to this energy that gives life to all beings. It is said that during death, it is the life-force that leaves the body for a final time. Although we can lose life force during our lifetime because of trauma, negative thinking and bad habits like drinking, drug abuse and other reasons that will be discussed in this book.

Rita Louise, Ph.D. in her article Energy: River of life states that "We are each filled with universal life force energy. This energy is the essence of our being, our consciousness, our soul" (n.p). This implies that every living being in this universe experiences this energy and it is vital to our existence. Many cultures have referred to this universal energy and given it much importance. To understand any concept it is best to review its history and ancient knowledge are a great source of wisdom without which we could not have progressed in life. Let us look at definitions of Life Force from various cultures;

Yogiraj Gurunath describes Prana "as the "breath of life" or "life-force energy"; a subtle element or entity underlying the fabric of all of creation, animating sentient beings with consciousness and life" (n.p). Here again, the author talks about a universal phenomenon while defining the life force. We can derive from this statement that the life force is the energy which gives consciousness and makes something alive. It is what separates us from the non-living objects.

In his book, Chi: Discovering your life energy, Waysun Liou tells us that "while our invisible life force signal, Chi, is in orderly action, life thrives and well-being abounds" (4). We can with these definitions sum up Life-force as the energy that flows through us and makes us alive. It is the very essence of living. The many pains and sorrows we suffer in life gradually depletes us of this energy until we die when that energy leaves our earthly bodies forever. As discussed earlier energy cannot be destroyed it simply passes on, changes form or transforms into something else. We may refer to this life-giving force as our spirit or soul no matter what we call it, we cannot deny its existence.

The idea is to prove that we can use this energy to find balance, and bring happiness back into our lives. Understanding Life-force and its importance can help gain perspective of why we suffer and how we can change that.

When we suffer from trauma, emotional or physical our mind tries to shield us from the pain by blocking the feelings that these incidents bring us. We call it being strong or moving on. But have we truly moved on? When we do not deal with certain feelings they build up in our subconscious mind and give birth to fear anger and remorse. We try to find explanations, excuses, and reasons for why we feel this way. Children who have suffered emotional or physical abuse tend to become adults with a series of problems that can range from addiction, self-harm, low self-esteem, anger problems, depression, etc.

Rita Louise, Ph.D. in her article Energy: River of life goes on to explain how the decrease in life force affects us, she states that "As the flow of life force energy moves through our physical, emotional, and spiritual bodies, it can become unbalanced, stagnant, or blocked. When this happens, we experience what is called dis-ease" (n.p). Simply put when the life-force energy is out of balance we feel sick and uneasy. Distress can cause us to feel unhappy and slowly these thoughts manifest themselves in our physical bodies. We must remember that mental well-being is as important as physical health. Also unlike our physical bodies that will eventually perish our life-force energy will continue to exist in the metaphysical universe. Therefore we must care about the energy we give and receive. What goes around comes around.

CHAPTER 2

What affects our Life-Force?

Often times we may not remember the trauma itself but the feeling never goes away. Our life force can get caught up in a cycle with these feelings, all our energy is focused on dealing with them. Like a needle pricking our subconscious mind that eventually changes our behavior, personalities and even our outlook on life. Imagine knowing a very happy person and say they went through a terrible loss or traumatic event. They never seem to be the same again. Their smile looks different, their eyes seem sadder; they become a ghost of their past selves. Michael Sky in her article Emotional Suppression helps us understand by stating that "When we suppress an emotion, the energy of that emotion does not go away. Rather than resolve the emotional energy through some form of response, we choose (however unconsciously) to hold it inside. "Though the immediacy of the feeling may pass, the energy does not" (n.p). She goes on to say in the same article that "As emotional suppression becomes an unconscious habit and emotional energy becomes stuffed inside, the free movement of vital energy gradually degrades" (n.p).

The above statements can help us form the understanding that it is the negativity inside us that leads to physical ailments. Emotional pain can feel worse than any physical injury. As we apply medicines to wounds they heal over time similarly we must apply holistic healing for our emotional wounds and give it time to heal. Simply wishing it away will not help.

Does emotional trauma cause health problems? A statement by Michael Sky in the article Emotional suppression answers this question; it goes as "Suppressed emotional energy can become tumorous, harden arteries, stiffening joints, weaken bones" (n.p). Any physical problem has its roots in some deep mental trauma or thought. People who constantly have bad thoughts about themselves or others suffer serious problems. But rarely do people realize that our physical world is being affected by our spiritual self. They do not seek to understand the root cause but try to fix problems with medicines, surgeries and other physical solutions. This may take away the disease but the life-force will not come back.

And if thoughts are not changed the problem may recur making it a miserable life. The knowledge of life-force can help such people see beyond the physical problem and make them feel hopeful instead of feeling helpless. Sometimes when people face challenges all the time, they become bitter and blame the universe for their misery without realizing their part in it. Young adult Cancer Canada in their article Emotional trauma can cause cancer make the following statement "Esme Fuller-Thomson, Ph.D., and Sarah Brennenstuhl, MSW, of the University of Toronto have drawn a link between physical abuse as a child and increased incidence of cancer. Physical abuse is accompanied directly with emotional trauma and I would imagine that not unlike a cancer diagnosis, this emotional trauma likely lingers long after the physical body has recovered, if it recovers". With the evidence so far we can now state that emotional and negative feelings build up over time and can cause very real physical problems. They kill us slowly sometimes without us realizing before it's too late.

CHAPTER 3

Positive Thinking

There have been numerous discussions of positive affirmations, and positive thinking. Can we alter our thought process to live a healthier life? In her book, You can Heal your life, Louise Hay says "No person, no place, and nothing has any power over us, for we are the only thinkers in it" (1). Further, in the same chapter, she notes that "What you choose to think about yourself and about life becomes true for you". Her statements show us that thoughts have more power than we believe. A victim of abuse over a period of time starts believing that somehow it is their fault, children who face verbal abuse such as being called "useless", "good for nothing", " burden" often at the hands of their parents start to think of themselves as such. Even if the parent is long gone the negative feelings still remain. They multiply multiple over time and every time something bad happens even the tiniest thing can seem disastrous and reinforce the victim with the belief that they are not good enough or deserving. Their life force is caught up in their bad childhood, mingled in those harsh words and forever present in their subconscious state.

Recurring nightmares and other sleep disorders that stem from deep-rooted emotional trauma can cause havoc in one's life. Many PTSD patients suffer from nightmares though their actual memory of the trauma may be distorted. Simply shutting down your feelings cannot work. We must feel the pain, let the sorrow come and then move on. Grief is a part of life and ignoring it can cause more problems than making anything better. Imagine never throwing out the garbage, ignoring it till your entire house is a dump. Can you live in such a house? So how can we live in our minds that are full of negative feelings? These thoughts take from us the life force that keeps us alive and healthy.

A well-balanced life-force gives us vitality and a joy for living. Happy people are happy not because of money, looks or other physical successes, they are happy because they believe so. Many famous people have said that they suffer from depression and feel very unhappy in life. Remember the famous actor Robin Williams, known for his brilliant comedy, tragically committed suicide in 2014. So why would a man who had accomplished so much and was well-loved, take such a drastic step? He was said to have suffered many emotional problems during the last few months of his life.

The very beautiful Marilyn Monroe took her own life at the young age of 36, she too was known to suffer from various mental health problems. Kurt Cobain known to have been suffering from depression and addictions killed himself at the height of his fame at the age of 27. What do these tragic stories tell us? No matter how much you have achieved in life you can still feel unhappiness because that is your mental state. No matter what you try to fill that hole with, be it money, drugs, sex or relationships true happiness can only come from within. A broken soul cannot heal with physical means.

In an article from idenics.com the following statement “Our own responses to the questions, we ask ourselves, such as “What’s wrong with me?” and “Why do I do that?” can be a source of continual misery. Most of the answers we come up with are only speculative; derived from our thinking rather than from our looking" (n.p), gives us more evidence of the effects of negative thinking. Life may not be fair but we must remember to be fair to ourselves.

CHAPTER 4

Healing from negative thinking

Often times negative thinkers become addicted to various substances such as alcohol, drugs, money, sex, self-mutilation, etc. 310recovery.com in their article Healing from addiction makes note that "When an addict becomes entirely depleted of life energy, they reach a point of physical, emotional and mental exhaustion. Dumped into a state of despair & depression, filled with cravings & without protective energy, they are vulnerable to a new addiction" (n.p).

We can now sense the vicious cycle of negative energy from these statements. To get rid of our problems we must go back to the source. Everything has a beginning, to able to correctly identify that can help us restore the positive flow of life force once again. Most people want to avoid confrontation of the core problem as they fear it will bring up unwanted emotions. The very emotions that they have been trying to run from but how can you run from something that lives in your head, has become a part of you? The only solution is to face these emotions consciously rather than dump them on our subconscious mind.

In her book Healing Developmental trauma, Laurence Heller, Ph.D. notes that "Our greatest desire is to feel alive. Meaninglessness, depression, and many other symptoms are reflections of our disconnection from our core vitality" (8). She further states that "Human beings respond to shock and developmental/relational trauma by dissociating and disconnecting. The result is a dimming down of the life force that leaves a person, to varying degrees/ exiled from life" (9). From all the above information we can now conclude that emotional and physical trauma can indeed deprive us of the vital energy of our life force.

If we wish to lead a better and healthier life we must retrieve this energy and understand the reasons which drain us of them. Every person faces different situations, trauma is not defined. An accident victim can respond to trauma differently from a rape victim. While an accident victim might become paranoid and anxious while outside their home, a rape victim might have difficulty in trusting people and forming relationships. Both can suffer depression and lack the motivation to move on in life.

In his book, Chi: Discovering your life energy, WaysunLiou tells us that "while our invisible life force signal, Chi, is in orderly action, life thrives and well-being abounds" (4). Negative emotional thoughts lead to emotional suppression and over time can diminish our ability to deal with trauma. They become like black holes in our minds that constantly pull our life force into its darkness. Although positive affirmations will bring about a certain change if the trauma is deeply rooted victims may need more holistic approaches to heal themselves. Let us now review other methods to retrieve life force;

YOGA- In the book Guiding Yoga's Light: Lessons for Yoga Teachers By Nancy Gerstein she says to "Practice uniting the body, mind, and spirit in celebration of our existence and of the vitality of the life force within us. The [To] perform reclining twists, reclining hamstring stretch, seated yoga mudra, and tripod" (78). Prana is widely discussed in yoga practice. It has been talked about since the start of the Hindu culture. An article from Yogipedia notes that "Life-force is the term given in yoga for one of the two types of energy that are present in all beings. The other type of energy is that of the mind or consciousness" (n.p). In the same article, we can find more important information, "The yogic practice of pranayama is one way in which the life force energy can be sustained and enhanced, Other practices that are said to improve the life force are chanting and certain yoga postures that stimulate the life force in particular areas of the body" (n.p).

MEDITATION; in the book MeditationAs Medicine: Activate the Power of Your Natural Healing Force By Guru Dharma Singh Khalsa, Cameron Stauth the writers stare that "Mediation can help bring about well-being, spiritual healing, a sense of deep connection to life, compassion, and peace of mind, and in many cases, needed physical healing" (xiii).

FOOD; Tyler Tolman in his blog says "most of us miss the fact that energy is about so much more than just calories. It's really about the nutrition and life force of a food" (n.p). Since food is the greatest source of energy is make sense to eat healthier more life force powered foods. Sugar and carbs are said to block and diminish life force in our bodies. People who eat natural and healthy food seem happier and more energetic not to mention that looking great makes a person feel great too.

CHAPTER 5

Life Force and Death

Let us now discuss what happens to the life force when death occurs. As we have previously noted that energy cannot be destroyed it simply transforms, we must now consider if this energy remains in the physical world. Does this energy affect living? Wendy Ann Zellea in her article Death is not the end of life force energy, defines grief as "the energetic and emotional withdrawal that occurs when the vibration and resonance of a person, who is no longer here, is removed from the Third Dimensional reality of another person" (n.p).

The death of a loved one can cause extreme emotional distress and can cause major energetic shifts as a result of the separation. There is energy all around us which we cannot see. The heat from the sun or the cool of the breeze, the life-giving energy of oxygen these are energies we have accepted. But think about the various other energies that exist in the physical world. Subconsciously our minds register these energies and therefore we can be affected by them. Have you ever suddenly felt fear or sadness when you visit a new and unknown place or a place where some tragedy has occurred? We feel so because of the energy that surrounds the place. Over time people have named these incidents as encountering a ghost, demon, spirit, etc. just like we have named the positive universal energy as God we have sought to name the negative as demons or ghosts. But on a metaphysical level we have learned that these are energies; Ying and yang, black and white.

In an article from Planet therapies about spirit release the author says "Certain places hold strong energy imprints due to events that have taken place there, strong emotions can also be stored in places or an area" (n.p). The living can be affected by earthbound spirits and it is known as spirit attachment.

Sudden mood change, loss of energy, drug, and alcohol abuse are a few symptoms that you are been infested by negative energy. This can affect people who are themselves suffering from some deep-rooted emotional problems. Spirits are attracted to the energy they vibrate and hence attach themselves to such people. In the same article on spirit release, the author defines Spirit Attachment [as] "the presence of a living or deceased entity in the energy field (aura) of a person or a place" (n.p). People who have had trouble while alive their life-force can become stuck in the same place even after death. Hence moving on becomes difficult and their souls become earthbound. So we may never be able to escape the negative cycle unless we make changes while still present in the physical world.

Einstein's famous formula E = MC2 states that all matter, from the atom to the elephant, is made up of energy. We are therefore forever immersed in and surrounded by energy. So it does not really matter what we chose to call it, what religion we follow or what culture we belong to, the existence of the life-force energy cannot be denied. The knowledge and understanding of this phenomenon are eye-opening and can help change lives. Humans today are in dire need of a more holistic lifestyle. With the amount of stress, pollution, junk food, the influx of technologies we have lost our connection to our souls. As metaphysical healers, this knowledge can help us understand the core reason for the suffering of our client.

Instead of telling them to move on and making them feel like it is simply their imagination, we can help them heal both physically and spiritually. Also, I believe that the knowledge of life force can help us be better humans as we try to attract more positivity in life. The teachings of karma and how our life-force exists beyond this physical world can infuse humans with spiritual responsibilities.

CHAPTER 6

Metaphysical Healing

How can we as metaphysical practitioner's help our clients regain their lost life-force and help them regain balance and prosperity? We as healers should have a deep knowledge of life-force and the various techniques to revive it. There are a number of holistic approaches that this book reviewed in the previous chapter.

Emotional suppression of trauma has been seen as a major concern and lead cause of many physical and mental ailments. We must learn to genteelly guide our clients through the release of these emotions. Dealing with them after a long time can cause breakdowns but we must let the tears fall in order to move forward. We must help them find the strength of forgiveness because without that they will be unable to find peace. Guilt can destroy a person from within and the client must learn to accept that he cannot change the past and that he can change his present actions for a better future.

Only the NOW is real, the thoughts we are having are happening now the trauma was long over. We are giving power to our emotional hurt by building a subconscious memory of it. It lives there, taking our life-force to thrive. By teaching our clients this knowledge we can enable them to take back their power and truly move on in life. Sleep disorders, headaches, mental health problems, shortness of breath, and other problems like unable to form relationships, anxiety, irrational fear, and self-harm can be cured with reviving the life-force. It has been called the natural healing power of the human body.

Even people who might not have suffered severe trauma in life might feel a loss of energy from time to time. The daily lifestyle; eating junk food, the stress of work, financial problems, pollution can cause the life-force to deplete in our bodies. Sometimes normal things like a breakup, loss of a job or fight with friends can be a major source of life-force depletion. Because we have become used to not dealing with our feelings they linger and multiply until we have completed been drained of our vitality. Children who have suffered deep emotional or physical trauma often have cancer as adults. They are often discouraged to talk about their feelings and become introverts as children.

Caging their emotions will build up a negative bank of energy subconsciously throughout their lives. Often these children suffer from other problems such as addiction, abusive relationships as adults, depression and low self-esteem or become abusers themselves. These problems, in turn, drain them of whatever remaining life force they have. Unless they tackle the core problem life will not improve.

CHAPTER 7

Trauma

Some people find it extremely difficult to talk about their trauma, the self-defense they have built up against it works against recalling the trauma consciously but it still remains in the subconscious mind. Night terrors, sleepwalking, insomnia can be signs of suppressed trauma building up in your mind. Our mind is equipped with tools to deal with emotional trauma, just like the immune system to fight physical ailments. Sometimes these tools fail because we have made up our minds to not move on. I have often felt that people cling to their past as excuses for their irrational behavior. It is always easier to blame others for our situation. We blame God, our parents or the unfairness of life without ever taking on responsibilities of our own actions. A drunk may have plenty of reasons to drink but the truth is that he chose to put that alcohol in his body. Life is all about choices and we always have a choice. It is our ability to make the right choice that matters and it is this ability we must work on.

The energy that vibrates from us attracts similar energy from the universe. If we constantly feel we are undeserving, unwanted or guilty those are the kinds of energy the universe sends our way. Pain can also become an addiction without us realizing it. When a loved one passes away, or a really long relationship ends, we constantly keep playing memories of that person in our heads.

These memories are always followed by feelings of loss and guilt. Somehow a happy memory has now turned into a toxic thought.

Remind yourself that it is okay to move on, understand that you deserve love and care. To move on is not to forget but making peace with the past. Knowing that no matter how much you wish it, it will not change. Yes it will be difficult and it will hurt so much, but that is the only way to free you from grief. You feel it and then you move forward. Always remember when one door closes another opens up, if not try the window.

There are always alternatives to our situations; we must learn to take over the control and stop feeling sorry for ourselves. As a child, my mother would tell the story of a drowning man. As he was drowning he prayed and prayed to god, but God did not appear. Soon a boat was passing by, but the drowning man refused to be helped. He was waiting for god. Surely God would rescue his true devotee. Soon he drowns. When he reaches the gates of heaven, he confronts God. “Why did you not help me?” God looks towards him with pity, “I sent you the boat.”

The message is simple, “God cannot help those, who do not help themselves.” In our self-pity and sadness, we sometimes refuse to seek the opportunities the universe sends for us. In the beautifully written book Sita, warrior of Mithali, author Amish Trivedi says “Happiness is not an accident. It is a choice. It is in our hands to be happy” (352). So how do we make this choice?

By changing our conscious thoughts and by evolving on a spiritual level. The understanding of life force energy and that life goes beyond our human bodies. We are not a body but we are souls that use earthly bodies as vessels. When the time comes we have to shed this body and move on to a higher dimension. These dimensions are also affected by our choices as humans. Sad and unhappy people will end up in lower dimensions, whereas the positivity we radiate now will help our souls to move to a better dimension.

"Karma means action, work or deed; it also refers to the spiritual principle of cause and effect where intent and actions of an individual (cause) influence the future of that individual (effect)" (Wikipedia). What we give is what we must be prepared to receive. We must understand how the universe works and align ourselves with its energy and principals. Often our hurt can seem unfair as if the universe is conspiring against you. Sometimes the tragedies that occur have no logical explanation. Why was a child raped, why did someone commit suicide, why someone lost their limbs in an accident, why did someone's parents abandon them?? There are so many bad things happening in the world today and that is because as a whole the human population has lost the knowledge of karma and the basic principles of the universe.

Often times the people who hurt us have been hurt by someone else in the past. The negative energy keeps on flowing in a vicious circle until someone starts the healing.

CHAPTER 8

Forgiveness

Forgiving has the most healing power and can lift both the victim and the tormentor. But forgiveness is not easy; to understand another's a pain when you yourself are hurting takes immense wisdom and compassion. It is easy to be sympathetic but empathy is learned. We must teach ourselves that this life will end; the sufferings of our soul will carry on. It is, therefore, our choice to make; do we want our souls to suffer outside of our human forms? Or do we wish to attain peace and move to a higher energy dimension?

Anger can be devastating. A caged beast is always more furious. The more we hold on to it, the worse it gets. We make more irrational decisions out of anger. Revenge, jealousy, and unhappiness all these emotions stem from anger. This only draws at our life-force without any benefits to us. We become captives of our own thoughts. And then we find escape in addictive behaviors that only lead to more suffering. Let us have a look at some common mental health problems that can be caused due to emotional suppression and negative thinking;

Anxiety- Irrational thoughts of nervousness, fear, worrying and self-doubt can be generally referred to as anxiety. While a little anxiousness is normal and can occur from time to time, anxiety as a mental health issues can be crippling. Negative thoughts are so magnified that the sufferer can find it difficult to be in a normal social situation. The American Psychological Association (APA) defines anxiety as "an emotion characterized by feelings of tension, worried thoughts and physical changes like increased blood pressure."

Phobia- Phobia is the Intense fear of a specific nature. When people bottle up intense emotions it can represent itself as aggressive fears which are mostly irrational and can disrupt normal life.

Social anxiety disorder- This can range from stage fright, a fear of intimacy, and a fear of humiliation to extreme social stress. Communicating with others may become difficult and sufferers tend to become recluses.

PTSD- Post-traumatic stress disorder is mostly seen in people who have suffered a past trauma that can range from rape, accidents to being in combat. People with PTSD get flashbacks of the traumatic event and often change behavior to avoid triggers. The fear of the trigger can cause extreme levels of stress and anxiety.

Depression- A mood disorder, people with depression can o through long spells of sadness and gloominess. It is difficult for them to form happy thoughts and they can feel disconnected from the present. Depression is most likely to lead substance abuse or self-mutilation. It is also a leading cause of suicide.

Nightmares and night terrors- Suppressed emotions can recur as nightmares and sufferers often have other sleeping disorders. My thesis for the masters was based on recurring nightmares and dream interpretation. And the research for that paper makes me believe that a lot of sleeping disorders stem from past trauma.

Addiction- Substance abuse is a common way for many people to deal with suppressed emotions. They use alcohol and drugs to numb their feelings and stop their thoughts. Addiction to sex, money, social media, gambling, etc in various ways in which some people try to find comfort. Addiction is a serious problem that leads to psychological and behavioral changes and lead cause of many physical problems.

Anger management problems- People who have suppressed their feelings over a period of time often have bouts of really bad temper. They can be extremely moody, mean and can seem uncaring to their loved ones. Anger is a natural emotion and we must learn to express it in a healthy manner before an explosion that can seriously damage our lives.

While all these problems can arise from emotional suppression it is the lack of life force that makes these problems worse. Once we try to examine the root cause of the emotion itself we can free ourselves and take back our life force.

CHAPTER 9

Happiness

Before I discuss the “Recover Yourself” technique that I have come up with to help my clients with emotional suppression and the loss of life force, let us discuss some small ways in which we can find balance and increase our life force. These can be everyday things like reading your favorite book or doing some creative work. What is essential is we chose to do an activity for the sheer happiness it gives us and not for any other materialistic reasons.

Meditation- As metaphysical practitioners, we know the importance of meditating. It is the best was to reconnect with your soul. Even five minutes can boost energy and make us feel better. Choose a quiet place and time, every day to meditate. There are many apps available to help beginners with meditation or you can even visit a meditation center near you if you find it difficult to meditate by yourself. The biggest challenge is to quiet the mind and stop the over thinking. With practice and dedication, almost everyone can learn to meditate for hours at a time.

Breath- Even though we do not need to learn to breathe, we need to learn to breathe consciously. If you have noticed we breathe shorter breaths while overthinking, being angry or emotional. Oxygen gives life and is, therefore, a vital source of life force.

Taking a deep breath can boost the oxygen levels in the body and help clear the mind.

Laughing- Laughter is indeed the best medicine. The vibrations of a laugh can revive the life force in the body and help us help alive and happy. Do things that make you laugh out loud. Friends are a great source of laughter. Learn to be silly and not serious at all times. Learn to laugh at yourself and build a sense of humor. Everyone likes a funny person.

Hobbies- A hobby should be something you enjoy and unrelated to your work. We must do it for pleasure and not gain. Read a book, paint, garden, dance, sing, or any activity you do for fun will help restore your vitality.

Exercise- Exercising helps to increase feel-good hormones in the body. In our quest for spiritual development, we often get disconnected from our physical body. Even though it is a temporary vessel it is the home our souls have chosen. Love and nourish it. It is your temple. In this day and age, a lot of emphases is put on beauty standards. People are increasing body shaming themselves because they do not look like magazine models. This, in turn, can cause unhappiness and sometimes lead to severe depression. Caring for your body is not narcissistic but shows self-care and that, in turn, helps revive the life force.

Ending toxic relationships- When a person constantly disrespects, abuses or hurts us, they suck the very life out of us. Learning to walk away from such situations is not selfish but vital. These can be partners, friends, siblings, or bosses. Try standing up for yourself first if they still continue to hurt you- verbally or physically. Leave. Some people use emotional manipulation and blackmail to stop their partner from leaving. This is not love. You are not doing any favors to either one of you by staying. Understand that they themselves are going through some trauma that has made them behave this way. If they refuse help and refuse to change, you must walk away for your own sake.

The act of kindness- When we do a selfless deed such as donate or volunteer, help stray animals, make meals for strangers, help fellow humans during a crisis any big or small deed done out of compassion- we feel good about ourselves. It also brings us good karma and balances our energies.

Clean eating- Food is our biggest source of energy and we must eat every day to maintain a healthy life. Yet with our busy lifestyle, we are giving food less importance. The many junk options available to us not only mess with our bodies but clog our life force energies. We must practice mindful eating and consume only foods that provide nourishment and vitality. Many people have formed a negative relationship with eating. Some are addicted and find comfort in food- emotional eating; some hate their bodies so much that they starve themselves.

A lot of people are suffering from food disorders- bulimia, anorexia, or binge eating. it is important to form a healthy relationship with food to live a happier life.

Time for yourself- If we cannot enjoy being by ourselves nothing in this world can fill the hole in our lives. Our demanding life- work, relationships, social interactions can drain us of energy and a little alone time can help regain some life force. A short nap, a little reading time, a day away from home any activity that suits you can be very beneficial for your mental health. Disconnect from all social media, shut off that Smartphone and learn to relax and enjoy the company of your own thoughts. Often people feel scared to be alone because of their thoughts. But once you have formed a better relationship with yourself your thoughts too will change.

Following your passion- Often times we come across people who are unhappy with their jobs and this unsatisfactory feeling and seep into our lives. In today's world success is measured by wealth and in the race to earn a livelihood most people forego their dreams. Follow your passion in life. When your work doesn't seem like a job you tend to succeed while finding happiness. Never stop working for what you truly believe in.

CHAPTER 10

Alternative healing

There are many therapies that various professional healers use to rebalance and revive the life force energy in their clients. Let us discuss a few;

Reiki- It is a form of alternative healing that originated in Japan. Reiki healers use “universal energy” to heal their clients. According to Wikipedia, “Reiki practitioners use a technique called palm healing or hands-on healing through which a "universal energy" is supposedly transferred through the palms of the practitioner to the patient in order to encourage emotional or physical healing” (n.p). This form of healing creates a feeling of deep relaxation for the client and can help heal minor aches as well as some major health concerns.

Acupuncture- A technique used in traditional Chinese medicine acupuncture uses thin needles to stimulate various points on the body. This method has been around for many centuries and is most commonly used for pain relief.

Crystal healing- according to Wikipedia in crystal healing “the practitioner places crystals on different parts of the body, often corresponding to chakras; or else the practitioner places crystals around the body in an attempt to construct an energy grid, which is purported to surround the client with healing energy” (n.p).

CHAPTER 11

“Recover Yourself”

Technique formulated by me for helping my clients to recover their lost life force, it is simple, easy to follow and has taken into consideration all the information presented in this book. I hope more metaphysical healers can benefit from this technique so that we can help the maximum number of people.

Life happens every day. Life is a sequence of events. One event from beginning to end makes time. Time is nothing else but a period between the beginning and end of the event. If the life events have beginnings but unexpected endings, the time gets lost.

For an event to end as per the expectations is the goal of spiritual being. If that goal is unfulfilled the being gets stuck in that event or in time.

These open-ended events can be anything like these;

- Incomplete communication with someone
- Half done work.
- Pending work
- Long due settlements
- Partially done promises
- Non-acknowledgement of other’s efforts.

- Not fulfilling one's obligations
- Not taking care of the body.
- Not in good moral standing with the group one belongs to.
- Unable to find satisfaction in daily living.

When life events take a sudden turn then also there is no end foreseen, like

- Death of a loved one.
- Sudden loss of a job.
- Betrayal in love
- Long unexplained illness
- Struggle to get established
- Physical pain
- Unconsciousness (Influenced by Evil Spirits)

As far as our existence in the metaphysical world is concerned we are simultaneously living in that world along with our physical existence. There are other beings in the metaphysical universe that are living without the physical form called a body. We are in constant interaction with our spiritual buddies or enemies. That relationship also absorbs our attention in the same way as it does with physical universe loved ones or enemies. This one line explains it all, "We are not free if they are not". These spiritual beings had to leave their bodies while their work or commitments did not end. As a result, they are not done even in the metaphysical universe. They are still stuck in time because the end was sudden or unacceptable. One is part of the spiritual universe of others knowingly or unknowingly. This is proven by other's experience over and over like these:

Common symptoms

- Sudden drug and, or alcohol abuse. If your friends are asking you, "What's gotten into you, why are you overdoing it so often?"
- A sudden change in behavior. One may very well have picked up a wandering soul if you've endured abuse, surgery, or serious illness as a child, and it (or they) might still be with you.
- Excessively emotionally trying periods of your life. Extreme stress breaks down your spiritual defenses and opens you up to strange energy.
- Acute, unexplained bouts of depression. If you can't explain the source, it's possible you may be carrying a heavy, unseen load.
- Hearing voices in your head, especially negative messages, could be a sign that you have a spiritual hitchhiker with you or that you're hosting a party with uninvited, invisible guests. We believe it's possible for problematic, other-dimensional energies to plant ideas in your head in order to manipulate your behavior for their benefit. Spiritually sensitive people, or those firmly tuned into their intuition, frequently hear messages within from the other realms, but it can be challenging to keep them closed off to foreign, toxic energy.
- Keeping all the above in mind I have been through many studies myself and now my education with IMM, I have come up with a simple therapy to recover oneself from the miseries, misfortunes, and unhappiness of living.

The process involves the following steps in general:

1. Locate the uneasy emotion one wants to get rid of.
2. Find the event in which that emotion is locked.
3. Go to the beginning of that event
4. Go through it and look at it from all the possible viewpoints.
5. Continue to go through the event until it is completely revealed to oneself from all the viewpoints.
6. Once done with the particular emotion. One can pick up another emotion and find the concerning event. Repeat the process till one recovers oneself from all the unpleasant, unexplained mysteries of the business of living.

With this technique and the knowledge of life force energy, we can solve a lot of problems for our clients. Understanding that the root cause of most problems lies in the mind and thinking of an individual and help us counsel our clients and teach them to recover themselves. We make life beautiful again with a little mindfulness and regain our life-force with simple everyday measures. Grief is a part of life, there is no prevention for grief as life is unpredictable. But we can equip ourselves to deal with it in a better manner. Like a lifejacket, we can use our emotional strength to survive even the roughest waters.

CHAPTER 12

Conclusion

The journey of researching for this paper has been eye-opening and has also helped me with my own personal problems. Metaphysical learning has taught me so much and the study of life-force has not only benefited me but helped me to develop a way to help my clients.

Life is not always rainbows and unicorns. After our million years as human beings on earth, we have slowly forgotten our spiritual world. That we think of only the consequences we face in this life has led to a lot of bad karma and wrong choices. Greed, addiction is on the rise like never before. People want more and more, and cannot seem to fill the deep hole in their lives. The rich want to get richer; the knowledgeable want to read more books without ever applying that to help others.

In our race to the top, we ceased to be human. We have become robots of this physical world. We have polluted our bodies and minds just like we have polluted this planet. Unhappiness is endemic and as the human race we are so unhappy, dissatisfied and fed up with living. Suicide due to depression has become so common nowadays. Young people who have so much more to live and learn are killing themselves because they are unable to regain their lost life-force. Cancer is yet another modern world problem, the manifestation of your negative thoughts killing you slowly and painfully.

Crimes like rape and murder are also rising and people have become so intolerable towards each other. Animal abuse is so bad that half the animals have been wiped off the planet. Why? Why have humans become like this!? We have discussed that emotional suppression can lead to many mental health problems it is also the main reason for anger. When we fail to express our anger in a right and just way it keeps on accumulating and turns us into monsters.

Think about all the shootings that have wrecked the world in recent times. So many young lives lost because we have failed as human beings to learn to deal with emotional trauma. Most people who have suffered trauma at the hands of someone else are more likely to do the same. We have to learn to be more empathetic, we have to learn to protect the innocence of our children and most importantly we must give more importance to the emotional development and emotional quotient of all citizens.

Instead of telling people to move on we must implore the importance of self-evaluation and help our clients to accept the past. Creating a mindset that helps us deal with all and any kind of emotional distress is what we must seek to achieve. It is important to be able to see the silver lining to even our darkest clouds. Everything happens for a reason even though we might not be able to see it. Simply giving up and thinking that you cannot live a better life is the worst thing to do to yourself. We must seek to thrive and not simply survive.

People today have realized the downfall of religion, it has divided us as humans and we have forgotten the teachings and have used this to harm one another. More and more people are turning towards spirituality and are seeking the understanding of the metaphysical world. Holistic and alternative healings are no more mumbo jumbo but an actual science that has opened up a world of possibilities. We are also more aware of mental health problems as depression, social anxiety and stress have affected a large part of the population and many young people are losing their life to mental health problems. With the rise of social media, it is ironic how disconnected we have become from each other and also our self. We spend hours trying to live a life on the internet while our soul crumbles away. What have we become? Soulless robots of the 21st century!

While this book has talked about life-force and how trauma affects our well being it is also imperative that we conclude that other reasons also take away our life force. Most of us feel shallow, unsatisfied and very unhappy with life. Sometimes we might not be able to see reasons and blame ourselves. After research and careful study, I would like to conclude that it is the energy that vibrates from us that makes things happens in our life. We are forever giving out negative energy that is what we will receive. It is not dumb luck that makes people happy but our thoughts that make us what we are. “We are what we think”.

The universe is full of energy that we constantly feel. It can be our own, those around us or the energies of people who have passed away. Energy has no end, it flows like a river. Seamlessly and continuously. It is up to us to allow what energies we attract. Our aura also pulls people towards us. So if you are always finding yourself surrounded by negative people it is because you attract them.

Those who suffer childhood trauma have witnessed bad relationships at home are more certain to end up in dysfunctional relationships as adults. They can either be the victim or the tormentor. Toxic relationships have the worse effects on health both physical as well as mental. It can cause depression, addictions, binge eating, low self-esteem, and self-mutilation. While it may not be easy to end a relationship it is so important to understand how much you are actually suffering.

Toxic people have a way of draining others of their life-force. It is how they feed themselves. Someone people will always remain like that no matter how much you try to help them. Sometimes it is better to walk away from a toxic person. Self-care is not selfish.

Even animals sense energies. Those with pets have known to say that their pet knows when they are sad and try to cheer them up. They can also feel negativity and can get anxious around such people. As a dog owner myself, I have seen my pets reacting to different people differently. They can sense those with good intentions and those who want to harm.

Humans too can feel the energy vibrating from others if we pay attention. What is commonly called as "vibes" can be described as a person's emotional state or the atmosphere of a place; we may feel bad vibes from a person or from a new place. This is because of the negativity vibrating from them; similarly, a happy person makes others feel at ease. Just being close to them can make you feel happy and comfortable.

Energy healers use their own positive energy to heal others and increase the life-force of their clients. Therefore as metaphysical healers, we must be able to harvest positivity in ourselves so that we may help our clients better. Even if you as a metaphysical healer are not using energy healing but using other life-force techniques like yoga, meditation etc, it is imperative that your own thoughts are positive. If you are at unease your clients too will feel uneasy around you and the whole point of the session will be lost.

Positive thinking is the key to regaining life-force energy and that anyone can be taught to retrieve their lost life-force. Happiness is how we feel about ourselves it has nothing to do with how much we have or who we are. Life can be unfair but sometimes it can be absolutely fantastic.

The small moments of joy are what we must hold on to rather than the bad things. Laughing with your friends and families, enjoying your favorite food, going on a vacation, or simply reading an amazing book, little things can give us so much joy if only we learned to appreciate these moments and stop reminiscing what we have lost. Those who live a simpler life and spend their time in helping others seem the most satisfied with life. They are not just healthy in their mindset but also enjoy good physical health. When we stress which is so common in the big cities our brain produces cortisol which in the right amounts help maintain energy but when a person is forever under stress cortisol levels raises and can cause anxiety, sleeping disorders, depression, weight gain and heart problems.

“Everyone gets depressed occasionally, but gloom should not be persistent in your life.” If you feel this way it is best to seek therapy. “A flow of sad thoughts through your mind can be frustrating because you can't be sure if depression is making you think negatively, or thinking negatively is making you depressed.”So you get stuck in this vicious cycle that only keeps taking from your life-force. (Can Negative Thoughts Be Stopped?)

Seeking treatment is the best option and going to therapy is nothing to be ashamed of. True strength is in realizing that you need help and taking the required steps to seek it. Although we cannot say that holistic healing and alternative methods can replace traditional medicines it can be a great way to reduce pain and help with the wholesome healing of the patient. Also, regularly practicing meditation, yoga, mindfulness and positive thinking does wonders for your overall health and should be encouraged. I hope that with the help of the knowledge from this paper and the understanding of life-force I will be able to help many people.

REFERENCES

Works Cited

PRINTED BOOKS REFERENCE;

Blumitti Robert, Vril: the Life Force of the God, iUniverse books, USA, 2010

GersteinNancy,Guiding Yoga's Light: Lessons for Yoga Teachers, Pendragon Publishing, USA, 2004.

GurunathYogiraj, Life Force Energy, timesofindia.com | Mar 29, 2012

Hay Louise, You can heal your life, Hay House Inc, USA, 2004

Heller Laurence, Healing Developmental trauma, North Atlantic books, Berkeley California, 2012

Khalsa Guru Dharma Singh, Stauth Cameron, Meditation as Medicine: Activate the Power of

Your Natural Healing Force, Fireside, New York, 2001

LiouWaysun,Chi: Discovering your life-force energy, Shambala Publications Inc, Boston, 2005.

Trivedi Amish, Sita, warrior of Mithali, Westland Press, India, 2017

ONLINE SOURCES;

310recovery.com, Healing from addiction

Can Negative Thoughts Be Stopped? by Fred Cicetti, livescience.com

idenics.com, resolving the confusions of life

Influenced by Evil Spirits: 6 Symptoms You Should Never Ignore,opposingviews.com, 2010

Louise Rita, Energy: River of life, American Holistic Health Association

MedicalNewsToday,Anxiety: Causes, symptoms, and treatments, 2017

Sky Michael, Emotional Suppression,innerself.com

Tolman Tyler, No Energy? Increase Your Life Force Energy with These Foods, tylertolman.com

Planet therapies, Spirit Release

Young adult Cancer Canada, Emotional trauma can cause cancer, youngadultcancer.ca

Wikipedia.com Zellea Wendy Ann, Death is not the end of life force energy, gaia.com